Danielle Fretwell: Tablescapes

We're always intrigued by what's just out of sight, concealed by a sheet or cloth. Danielle Fretwell ignites our curiosity by covering large sections of her paintings, leaving us to wonder what's underneath. She completes the illusion by painting a textured piece of fabric over the original image. In these latest works, the idea of concealment extends to segments of darkness or layers superimposed on one another, creating pieces that are visually striking and pique our curiosity. Until 8th November.
