Danielle Fretwell: Shallow Invitations @ Alice Amati

A breakfast is only half visible with the top half concealed by a curtain – what's going on behind it, is there someone at the table? Danielle Fretwell paints the entire scene in hyper-realist detail before concealing a large part of it – so the work is a complete scene but only the artist knows what's concealed. Other paintings are entirely concealed with realistic stitching painted on as if the work is wrapped in fabric. This is a phenomenal exhibition of paintings. Until 13 April.
